Didsbury Faces Serious Situation Caused by Schools

A joint meeting of the Town Council and School Trustees and a few ratepayers was held on Wednesday night last in the office of the Western Mutual after a council meeting.

The matter up for discussion was the serious situation in which the town finds itself because of the heavy requirements of the School Board in financing the Schools and the effect that it is having on the ratepayers, many of whom are finding it impossible to meet the high tax rate and not lose their little properties.

Major Chambers stated that the School Board had put in their estimates for the year and it was found that they were higher even than last year which would mean that an even higher tax rate would have to be struck this year to meet their requirements, and he and the Council felt that an open discussion should be had on the matter. He also brought out the fact that the town was facing a serious situation in a great many ways because nearly all the taxes that could be collected had to go to the upkeep of the schools while sidewalks and other incidental town affairs had to be neglected because there were no funds, and if the present conditions existed much longer the town would face bankruptcy. He did not wish to be put in a wrong position by not calling the ratepayers attention to these matters.

The town already had a great deal of property on its hands that was not revenue producing because it had to be taken for taxes and consequently the town was thus much short of the cash to carry on. The Mayor thought that it was time that some definite action should be taken to relieve the town of some of the enormous burden of the schools.

Mr. Norman Clarke, a member of the School Board who had just returned from Edmonton where he had attended the Convention of School Trustees, was asked what action had been taken, if any, at that Convention to relieve the High School situation. He stated that the matter was a very live one at the Convention as so many towns found themselves in the same position as Didsbury. A committee had been appointed to interview Premier Greenfield and the Hon. Perrin Baker, Minister of Education in the matter but they very emphatically told the committee that they were not in a position to do anything in assisting the High Schools this year, that the south country was in such a condition that their needs came first. However, they were very sympathetic in the matter and realized the condition of affairs.

Given under my hand at Westerdale this 30th day of January, 1922.

It was brought out during the

The Curling Prizes

Very keen interest is being taken in town this year over curling. It has been one of the most successful seasons ever had so far, and the membership is at a maximum. Several rinks at different times have entered in outside competitions and while they did not win any laurels they at least let the other Clubs know that we have a live organization composed of sportsmen. Several schedules have been drawn up and played off with great enthusiasm and the Didsbury Cup which has been put in open competition has furnished many an extra interesting game.

The last two schedules have been made into somewhat of a tournament. In the first schedule the fifteen rinks were divided into three groups of five who each played off amongst themselves. In the second schedule the rinks were again divided into three groups of five the highest five being entered in the Grand Challenge Competition, the next five in the Hub Special and the other five in the Consolation.

There are twelve prizes altogether, four in each competition, which have been collected largely through the influence of Mr. W. O. Zimmerman.

Canada's Needs

No. 6—Scientific Research

In the course of the several articles which have appeared in this column under the above general heading, some of Canada's needs have been enumerated and means of meeting them have been suggested. Recently, however, a little pamphlet has been issued by the Homeless Advisory Committee of Scientific and Industrial Research which makes the serious consideration of the Canadian people, and is worthy of widest circulation. It presents at least one very practical suggestion how some of the needs referred to, more particularly in the fourth article of this series, can be met. It is, therefore, proposed to quote at some length from the pamphlet in question which is entitled "Research and the Problems of Unemployment, Business Depression and National Finance in Canada."

I am not a protectionist but I say this: declared a statesman now dead. "The variety of work carried on among the citizens of Canada should be as comprehensive as possible."

"Not because we are thus enabled to boast of the number of our trades—that would be mere vanity."

"Not merely because our country should be able to fill as many as possible of its own needs without having to ask foreign aid."

"Not merely because we should learn as soon as possible to finish the raw material which Nature endowed us—with the added helplessness by asking foreigners to finish them for us and giving them the wages and the profit on our raw materials."

"Not merely because our country should as soon as possible escape from dependence for its prosperity on any one kind of production but should diversify its economic base."

"Our home demands should remain our most ambitious aims and dangers within her own boundaries by encouraging for their sake that variety of occupation from engineering to farming, from chemistry to literature—which, if they want the highest awards and honors, they are still compelled now days to seek abroad."

One of the serious drags on the strength of the Dominion of Canada is the annual loss of engineers, chemists, scientific farmers and technical experts—whose training paid for by Canadians in Canadian schools and universities supported by Canadian public money, thus goes out to make foreign countries rich and place Canada further in their debt for foreign goods and services.

Monopolies of knowledge—that is, monopolies of special branches of technical knowledge—constitute one of the most powerful weapons of trade today."

Secret agreements, combines, trusts and the ordinary method of "soy sprouts in the restraint of trade," become very mild and impotent weapons when compared to such formidable instruments as, for example, a secret chemical formula that might be scribbled on the back of a calling card.

In the bloodless wars for international trade it is the armies of chemists and engineers that must be mobilized, drilled and directed against the para-petroleum, coal-tar, rubber, typewriter, telephone, telegraph, intelligence departments, press bureaus, salesmen and even the courts of a great big nation who can come bold for him, trade for a country whose producers are not armed with scientific knowledge of their work.

A great concern manufacturing concern in the United States is able to dominate its field at least half the world because it knows more scientific secrets of that trade than anyone else. Because, if a new concern started in opposition, it need only reach into its pigeon holes for some new formula—not otherwise convenient to exploit at present—by which to raise its product one step beyond the competition of the world-wide rival.

So in steel-making? So in the manufacture of electrical apparatus? So in textiles? So in chemicals? So in agriculture? So in every important branch of human industry?

So in Canada—as compared to other nations—everyone of our industries is threatened and must ultimately fall under the thrall of foreign domination unless it keeps pace with the advances in technical knowledge.

So unless we master all that is to be known regarding the nature and possibilities of our soil and supplies of varied raw materials, Canadians must ultimately find themselves at the mercy of foreigners who know how to prey upon our riches "for purposes of commerce."

Fifty concerns in the United States retain research departments at costs ranging from $250,000 to $2,000,000 a year. In England, France and Germany, the race for technical knowledge for purposes of competitive speed. The measurement of a material gets to be just a matter of seconds. The scales that can measure a grain of sand will quickly do its rounds.

The question is, shall Canada keep reasonably in pace with the modern movement? Shall Canada add to her natural possessions a superior knowledge of how to use them?

Can the needed variety of occupations for ambitious Canadian sons and daughters be maintained unless she does make places for such knowledge and encourage those who extend it?

Can the burden of Canadian taxation and the evils of unemployment be offset if Canada, in her struggle for markets and for good returns for her wares, does not possess herself of the instrument of technical knowledge?

Will Limit Navies And Restrict Use Of Gas And Submarines

Washington—The Washington negotiators are in favour of armament restrictions, their consummation when a plenary session of the Asia Conference gave definite and public approval to the two treaties limiting navies and restricting the use of new articles of warfare.

One of the covenants thus settled after eleven weeks of debate established a fixed ratio of capital ship strength between the five great powers and other pledges, then again suspended submarine warfare and the use of poison gas. Within a day or two the plenipotentiaries of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy will formally sign at their meetings.

At the same session the Far Eastern wing of the conference moved forward toward conclusion of its tasks by announcing officially the terms of the Shanghai settlement and by giving final approval to nine of the resolutions adopted in consultation in regard to China's problems, March 8.

New Record For

Vancouver Port

Largest Number of Ships Called During January

Vancouver—Fifty-three deep sea ships, not including the big vessels that ply between Vancouver and San Francisco, entered and departed at this port during January.

This sets a new mark for Vancouver and it is expected that the end of the year will see the total of deep sea vessels arriving and departing above any preceding year. In November, 1919, fifty-five ships entered and departed, but these included many oil, freight and passenger ships to California ports which now are classed as canals.

Last year, to the end of December, 182 ships arrived here compared with 136 vessels during the preceding 12 months.

Ottawa—The amalgamation of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police with the militia, naval and air forces in the proposed department of defence is creating much interest as to the future of that force. During the last two sessions of legislature was before parliament to decide for bringing that force out of the way and amalgamating with it the Royal police with headquarters at Ottawa. There was considerable opposition from members of parliament, who contended that the force had been moved to the east and enlarged until it was becoming something in the nature of "a standing army."

In the house much criticism was launched against the government of the day on the ground that needless expense was being incurred and that the force would have been better occupied had it been kept at its former work of policing only the less settled areas of Western Canada.

In view of this attitude among Liberal Members of Parliament, it is now expected that the Mounted Police Force will be reduced to something like its former footing, though so far as can be learned there has been no decision or even discussion by the government as to what its policy in this regard is likely to be.

SUCCESS OF THE PIT SILO IN ALBERTA

In these days, when so great an emphasis is placed upon the crop failures of Southern Alberta, not enough attention is being paid to what actually has been accomplished and what can be accomplished, even on the dry lands of the Southern part of the province, in the way of successful mixed farming.

The situation in the south is often misunderstood by many people who are frequently heard to express the opinion that settlement of that country was a mistake, and that it can never have a future as a prosperous farming country. As a matter of fact, given proper cultivation and diversified methods, splendid results have been attained.

Mixed farming is not a fortune maker in a few years, as many farmers hoped grain production would prove, but mixed farming provides the sure way to ultimate prosperity with a farm home free of the worry of debt, a suitable education for the family and a bank account for one's advanced years. Moreover, there is the satisfaction of building up a farm that pays its way as it goes along. Some farmers in Southern Alberta have accomplished this, and will continue to do this, to an increasing extent.

The great essential, of course, is to get succulent feed, and the problem is to find a cheap method of securing it. With this in view the Department of Agriculture has been experimenting with the two different types of pit silos. One of these is the French silo, 25 ft. long by 12 ft. wide by 10 ft. deep, studded with tamarac posts, straw and earth to keep out the frost. The other is an entirely open one, straight on two sides and sloped on two sides. The experience of the Department has led to the conclusion that this type of silo should be sloped on all sides.

The pit silo has three advantages. The first is that it costs practically nothing but the labor required to build it, secondly it saves labour, and lastly the silage does not freeze solid as is the case with other types of silos.

The experiments of the Department of Agriculture have established beyond doubt the value of the pit silo. Two of these have been in operation, one at Athabasca and the other at Olds. The silage obtained in these is equal in quality to that obtained from more expensive silos. Sheep have been fed from the silo at Athabasca for some time.

SITUATION CAUSED BY

discussion that Mr. Clarke had taken the initiative in some action to form High School districts to take the place of the secondary consolidated S. D., which has proven a failure, and he with two other representatives at the Convention had been made a committee to work out his proposition. The plan as nearly as could be made out was to divide a certain area around each town to include parts of rural school districts into a High School District after a vote of the ratepayers in said area had been taken. The extra taxation that this would entail on said rural section of the district would be so small that it would be almost negligible while the whole amount would go a long way to help the town carry on High School work which was a boon to the farmer as well as the town dweller. He had drawn up a rough plan and had stated his ideas and the Minister of Education had been impressed with it so much that he had called on Mr. Clarke to let him have it.

A great deal of enthusiastic discussion took place on this phase of the question but it was generally felt that it would not help out the situation very soon as certain joint action would have to be taken by all town school districts so that the government could pass the necessary legislation.

The Mayor and those present were very much taken up with the idea and he stated that he was out to help the School Board all that he could but would like to see some relief as quickly as possible. The school rate last year on the town ratepayers was 55 mills and if nothing could be done with respect to the schools it would at least 70 mills, which would make a big increase over the whole tax rate this year instead of a reduction which the town ratepayer had expected.

Dr. Clarke chairman of the School Board, stated that the Board had gone carefully over the estimates and they found they could not get along with less if the schools were to be kept up according to government regulations and the salary list remained as high as it is at present; that certain alterations had to be made in sanitary arrangements this year as the government demanded them. Under existing agreements with the teachers he did not think that anything could be done this term with the salaries but that next term some amicable arrangement could be made perhaps.

Mr. W. G. Liesemer voiced the feelings of the ratepayers in stating that the burden of increased taxation in town was not only becoming unbearable but an impossibility even for the business men to carry and was in hopes that something could be done speedily to relieve the burden.

Mr. H. E. Osmond made the suggestion that as it would be some time before the necessary steps could be taken to form the proposed High School districts that grades XI and XII be cut out for a year and a saving made in the salary list. This proposition did not seem to receive very much favor from those present.

The meeting did not seem to be able to arrive at any decision as to how this year's school taxes were to be pared down and the Mayor again stated that he refused to be made the scapegoat if the town went bankrupt because of its inability to collect the school taxes.

On a motion by Mr. W. G. Liesemer, seconded by Dr. Clarke, it was decided that a committee be formed of the Mayor, Chairman of the School Board with the assistance of Mr. W. A. Austin, town clerk, arrange for a meeting of representatives of School Boards and Town Councils from Crossfield, Cawthron, Olds, Bowden and Innisfail to be held in Didsbury in February 22nd at 1 o'clock, to take up the matter of forming High School Districts. The action carried unanimously with the adoption that Mr. Norman Clarke be asked to assist. Dr. Clarke agreed and stated that he would do anything in his power to help the work along.

The meeting then dispersed. Before the general meeting was called the Council were holding their regular business meeting and while the audience was waiting two instances came before the Council showing how seriously the high tax rate is affecting some hard-working people. One was an application from a crippled ratepayer asking for a reduction on his last years taxes which amounted to $240 on property which was returning no revenue. The Council had to give him a reduction of one-half or he would have been compelled to lose his little property. Another case was also brought before the Council of a man who is trying hard to build up a chicken business and whose taxes on his property amount to $260 which he is unable to pay.

Gardiner retained his sense of location and shipped silently to the wall. Harris was gasping about the pain in the darkness, crying, "What is it? Allan? For God's sake, what has happened? Am I dying?" "No, you're safe," he said, "but you could hear Gardner's stealthy movements. Gardner's hand fell on a log of the wall and his keen fingers traced their way along the wood until he found the bag would be at his feet. At the fifth step he touched an object on the floor; he leaped over and raised the boots in his hands.

Harris' heart had responded to the intense darkness and he could discern a square of green gloom where the window admitted the light. He crept forward, his hands toward his feet, with the last step his foot slipped through a log and sank into the floor, and he stumbled and fell. The blow was so violent that his blood was spilt on the floor; he leaped over and raised the boots in his hands.

The sound arrested Harris, and he saw Gardner's profile reflected in the Turner was upon him. For the first time he realized that it was Allan, and fear about in the darkness without, an apprehension, like a spectre. Then gave Gardner an opportunity; he was able to clasp his arms about Harris' ribs, and with a quick turn of the body he flung the man across the floor. At the same moment he freed himself from his entanglement and made another dash for the door.

But Harris, still numbness from his heavy sleep, now realized that some kind of tragedy had occurred, and guessed enough to believe that Allan was a victim. From his prostrate

A Stitch in Time

Quick action is the only hope when kidney disease appears.

There is a whole train of dreadfully painful and fatal ailments which soon follow any neglect to get the kidneys right. Among others are rheumatism, lumbago, Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure.

In Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will find a treatment which is both quick and thorough. Mr. C. E. Rasmussen, Lindale, Alta., writes:

"I was a great sufferer from kidney disease and lame back for more than a year. I took Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and sang upon his advice I tried them. After I had taken one box I felt better, so I continued until I had used up two boxes. I am now as well and strong as ever and am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone suffering as I did."

position, with one powerful leg he interrupted Gardner's flight, and the next moment the two men were rolling on the floor in each other's arms. Harris was more than the stronger of the two, but Gardner was active and had some skill in wrestling. Besides, Harris had been taken wholly by surprise, and had not yet got his wits about him. Gardner was white Gardner had full knowledge of all the circumstances, and the struggle was less uneven than might have been expected. Gradually cutting the knot that had thrown the revolver from his hand, Gardner sought in the darkness for his adversary's throat, nose, eyes. Harris, too, was not slow, and managed to lift him bodily from the floor and crashed him down again upon it, but the next instant Gardner had one of the pins of his coat at his shoulder, and his knee down with great force on Harris' elbow, compelled him, at the cost of a broken arm, to face his conqueror. Harris' grip was free, but Harris' grip was too much for him; with the quickness and fury of a tiger three times upon the farmer's head was wrenching free arm about his throat. With his arm partially cut off Harris released the grip of his other arm, and Gardner, taking advantage of this opportunity, moved to bring both arms to bear on Harris' throat.

Things began to go so rapidly with the farmer; face downcast, his adversary off and was losing strength rapidly with his choking. Gardner no longer sought an opportunity to escape; his blood was up, and he was in the fight to the finish. He finally rolled at last by his heart instead of his head. His heart, however, to retain his present advantage, was unable to do so, and his gasping mouth, Harris was no more dejected than most of mankind, but when fighting for life, and choking death, he was ready to seize any advantage, and with a great effort he brought his jaws together upon the man who had been his master.

With a yell of pain Gardner sprang to his feet, jerking the farmer into a half-sitting posture as he did so, and with a great roar for all the world, burst into a most unexpected adventure. For Gardner's head was again in command, he rushed through the door, half rolling over the obstacle of the chair, and then, with a yell of pain, he was thrown to the floor. He lay there, his body twisted, his head in the darkness. A groan, sharp and shrill, lay in the doorway, and within it was a figure which might once have been a man. Harris' heart shrank from the sight. "Allan," he moaned, "my boy, Allan." He thistled across the crimson floor toward it, holding the lantern aloft, and with a shout and part of a trouser leg peeped through the mass. He held the match downward, leaning over them. They were two.

"Thank God," he murmured, swelling with a great hope. "Thank God for that!" He struck another match and found the lantern. When he had lit it he surveyed the little building, and saw Allan's gun lying at the end of the floor. No, and that moment he did think that the now Allan had been smothered in his mire, and when he thought of Allan, money was no consideration. But now a greater thought overcame him. He had been attacked by robbers, they had been attacked by robbers, knowledge of their expedition had come to him, and he had been beaten. Allan had been set upon. The boy had emptied his gun—the bulletless mass in the doorway told that—but the boy had been beaten. The robbers had set fire to the east and Allan had pursued them eight hundred. They had fired at him as he rushed from the building, and he was the last to be seen a few seconds after the final report. He was not quite clear as to his own share in the fight, but he saw the gun lying on the floor.

He began to wonder who had intended to Gardner and him. Had they been shot down as they would have been? That was evident. The gun had been loaded, and he stopped at nothing. Harris never for a moment suspected his old neighbour of treachery. He was himself a hard, determined man, and he had heard that a code of honour, none the less, among honourable men. He had been quite impudent, so said Harris, and because it was impossible for him, the possibility for Elles never entered his mind.

Harris had not yet fully realized the loss of his master. It was overshadowed by the more tragic events of the day. He had been beaten, but his master, for Allan had been smothered in his mire, although he had little doubt the boy would take proper care of himself, and even if unharmed, would come home with a vengeance. The fact that Allan had not taken his gun was reassuring; if there had been any great danger he would not have left it behind him, nor the gun get lost and end in the search.

EAT DIRT

As he reached this decision his eye caught a gleam of something shining on the floor. He walked to it and found a revolver fully loaded, except for one chamber, which had been discharged. "This is evidence," Harris said. "Important evidence." Harris had the Outlaw's contempt for this kind of evidence, but he was not much better off. He had been taken by surprise, and he was not much better off.

"J. T.," he said to himself. "J. T. Those initials seem familiar. I wonder if this is the place I found them in the pocket book."

Replacing the weapon on the floor, he stole out of the cabin, avoiding the silent obstruction in the doorway. Outside he stood for a moment undecided. The driver, who had come from him, might beckon Allan back to the barn, but it also might prove a site to be avoided, if they were still visible. He had brought the revolver with him. Yes, there it was again, a great, bold, beyond question, half-grown, half-stubborn, black, hairy, half-grownd boy to Harris, in the creation from his first awakening ear. It was very dark, clouds having obscured the stars, and an occasional big drop of rain spot after spot, the rain falling above or through that roar suddenly he tandem heard a sound from the bushes near at hand. He held his breath, and then, as he had wished, he had brought the revolver with him. Yes, there it was again, a great, bold, beyond question, half-grown, half-stubborn, black, hairy, half-grownd boy to Harris, in the creation from his first awakening ear.

With a sudden surge of returning hope he brought his ear down to the open mouth, tinged with light red, breathing heavily, and then, closing in the ravaged lungs. Then came the human sound, half snuffle, half grownd boy to Harris, in the creation from his first awakening ear.

as very music from heaven. His boy still lived, and still should live. To be continued
